The Pond, (Evening.)

By the bright, still glow through the window-pane,
And the emerald lawn where the snow has lain;
By the sun-crowned hill* from which her eye
First looked in love to the summer sky;
By the dewy pine, by the very breath
Of the violet tufts in the grass beneath;
Upon thy heart there is laid a spell,
Holy and precious—Oh, guard it well!

And bless that love,—it hath gentle might,
A guardian power and a guiding light.
